On 10th March, a group of 7 and 8 year-old girls from I Can Be came in to experience life at the PIDG offices, and were given a special presentation by Helen Senior, PIDG’s Group Head of Finance.

Philippe Valahu recorded a podcast with African Business magazine. Philippe spoke about coordinating sustainable, public-private infrastructure partnerships in poor and fragile countries.

To celebrate World Water Day, March 22nd, James Leighland, Advisor to the PIDG Technical Facility, TA, wrote a blog on a PIDG-supported pioneering water concession in the city of Kigali and the Eastern Province of Rwanda.

PIDG was proud to host the PIDG and InfraCo Asia in Pakistan events. PIDG was a core partner in these two events which centered on developing sustainable infrastructure ecosystems and on how to deliver climate-smart and resilient water and sanitation services, and how to deliver a competitive business environment for public-private infrastructure development in the region.

PIDG was invited to the UK-AIS Sustainable Infrastructure Forum, to talk about the tailored infrastructure finance solutions that PIDG companies provide to Africa.

PIDG was proud to host the invest Africa event. Philippe Valahu and Emilio Cattaneo, TA, provided a panel presentation on developing sustainable infrastructure partnerships in the agricultural and renewable energy sectors across Africa.

PIDG contributed to a number of British Expertise International (BEI) regional outlook events to discuss economic and political challenges, and the key areas of opportunity for UK companies in infrastructure, power generation (renewables), education, agribusiness and health.

World Water Day

To underline World Water Day, March 22nd, Infracor Asia and PIDG held a virtual panel discussion on the benefits of implementing water concessions and how PIDG backed projects in Abidjan, the capital of Côte d’Ivoire, and in the city of Kigali and on how PIDG backed projects are improving access to water in Sierra Leone.
