Taking action on climate change

Marco Serena,
Head of Development Impact, PIDG

The combination of the threat of climate change and the need to rethink how we get economies moving again through and after the COVID-19 crisis presents the infrastructure development sector with the challenge to critically examine how our work relates to the wider objective of sustainable development.

My role at PIDG centres on overseeing the early stage impact assessment of all PIDG investments, the process for monitoring and evaluating their impact and PIDG programmatic work to deepen development impact including on gender and climate.

In 2019, PIDG refreshed its climate change approach, driven by the urgency to accelerate a transition toward net zero carbon.

PIDG's overall commitment is to support the goals of the Paris Agreement on climate change, while we continue to pioneer innovative technical and financing solutions to support sustainable infrastructure and meet the socio-economic needs of those who benefit from our projects.
